One time I was in my backyard practing ~~way~~ hitting ~~to~~ ~~apples~~ apples with my baseball bat so that I could improve my hand-eye coordination, and my dog came over and started to watch me. After about ten minutes, my dog became antsy. I ~~cot~~ couldn't figure out why so, I kept hitting apples. Then I picked up an apple, tossed it into the air, and started my swing. When I was about halfway through my swing, my dog jumped into the air and tried to catch the apple, I saw this and tried to stop but couldn't. My ~~bas~~ bat smashed into his jaw, breaking it.

This made me feel terrible. I couldn't believe that I was so stupid. I should have been able to know what he was about to do.

After that I never went out to play baseball without knowing where my dog was. It made me more responsible and more aware of what might happen if I don't ~~put~~ pay attention.

The long term lesson that I learned was to be more conscious of what might happen and do everything in my power to prevent that from happening.
