Sitting on a throne-like chair on the top of a balcony, I look out towards the blue, cloudless sky. I hear the sounds of miniature motorcycles winding through Paris' stony streets. As I slowly sip my minty tea, I see a dove circling around the top of the Eiffel Tower. This city is definitely the best place to be. If I could go to one place in the world, I would go to Paris for its dazzling sights, delicious food, and for the chance to relax.

The first reason I would like to go to Paris is to see the beautiful sights. I would go to the top of the Eiffel Tower and see the layout of the city before me. This breath-taking sight would entitle me to take several pictures as well. I would also go see Notre Dame in all its glory. I have always wondered what the interior looked like, and a trip to Paris would give me a great chance to find out.

The next reason I would like to visit Paris is for its scrumptious food. I would love to sit in a café and eat escargo while staring at the sun. Also, I could ingest real French baguettes in real fancy, five-star restaurants.

The last reason that explains my desire to go see Paris is for the chance to relax. Granted, the U.S does have some wonderful places to behold, but Paris would allow me to escape the worries and woes of my town. I could relax the day away in hotels by swimming and other activities. In Paris I could get away from it all.

Ahhh... I sip the last of my tea and yawn as twilight strikes. I stretch and gather my supplies as I go back into my suite. This place was a great place to relax in. I look back and see the Eiffel Tower and sigh. I would miss the sights and foods I had seen here

China

If you could choose one place in the world to go, where would it be? The one place I would go, if I could choose to go anywhere in the world, it would be China. I would go there because it is a lot different than the United States, my grandma went there, and there are alot of amusing things to do.

The first reason I would go to China is because it is a lot different than the United States. Civilians in China talk different languages. They also eat very unlike food than we do. Their way of dressing is diverse than the way we dress. Also the stores and shops do not sell clothes like the United States.

Secondly I would like to go there because my grandma has been there. When she went, she said it was a blast! She did alot of spectacular things. The citizens that she met were extremly kind and caring to her. My grandma's experiences there were radicle adventures. She absolutly adored going there, and would go back again.

Lastly I would go there because there are alot of joyful things to do. You could go shopping for traditional garmets. If I were there, I would want to meet new people. To go to the finest resturants and eat the best of the best food would be a dream for me. I would also stay at the most expensive hotel that I could find.

China is a very beautiful place to go, and it would be my dream to go there. It would be adventures, memorable, and an experience of a life time. That is why I would want to go to China.
