

First Black Leader

In 1994, nonwhites were allowed to vote in democratic elections for the first time in South Africa's history. They helped elect Mandela president, making him the country's first black president. This photo shows Mandela as he celebrates his victory.

