The School Community Network
We’re in the business of connecting classrooms to kitchen tables.

The School Community Network, designed and developed by the Academic Development Institute, offers a suite of family engagement services and a Resource Library that work to evaluate and fortify current family engagement practices and assist teams in their work to build and strengthen learning environments at school and at home where students thrive.

The School Community Network’s Building Block Framework

Our program components, tools, and resources are organized by Building Block to make it easier to match tools and resources with family engagement objectives and planning.
School Community Network’s Building Block Framework Defined

Shared Leadership: Families, teachers, and administrators acting together in decision making – especially in areas where responsibilities of school and home overlap.

Goals & Roles: Written, agreed-upon guidelines that establish a course of evidence-based practices which students, teachers, and families will follow together to create and maintain a unified system that supports student success.

Communication: Ongoing conversations; interactive communication among the families, students, and teachers that builds relationships based on trust and makes collaborative work possible.

Education: A learning community for everyone – families, students, teachers, school staff, and volunteers – where members are provided with education opportunities that build their capacity to fulfill their roles and responsibilities.

Connection: Face-to-face association (families-school staff and parent-parent) with opportunities to form common understanding and engage in common experiences.

Shared Leadership and Goals & Roles offer the best results when supported by Communication, Education, and Connection.

More than a tool…it’s a complete tool kit
The Family Engagement Tool (FET)

Congratulations on your decision to support the Family Engagement work of schools by providing the Family Engagement Tool and Resource Library for schools to use.

FET is a web-based process used to conduct a self-assessment of current family engagement practices, which helps school teams to create a needs-based plan tailored to the unique characteristics of their school community. FET’s Resource Library provides planning tools, rubrics, workshop materials, and course curricula to help bring the vision into view.
